MELVIN VANIMAN'S SPECTACULAR DEATH FROM DIRIGIBLE

Story of Inventor's Death in Sight of Wife and Children

ATLANTIC CITY, (N. J.) July 2.—

Sailing out over the Atlantic ocean under perfect control with thousands watching, the great dirigible balloon Akron, in command of Melvin Vaniman, with a crew of four men, exploded while 1000 feet in the air early today and shot down into the water a tangled mass, carrying to death the daring aviator and his companions.

In all the tragic history of disaster to airships and aeroplanes, probably none has been as sensational as that which brought to an end the greatest and most costly air craft ever constructed on the western hemisphere. Built to withstand the storms of the Atlantic, and to carry at least a dozen men across the ocean to Europe, the Akron went to her doom in calm weather.

Two Brothers Perish.

Those who went down with the big dirigible besides the intrepid Vaniman, who previously had one thrilling experience in an airship on the ocean, were:

Calvin Vaniman, his younger brother.

Fred Elmer.

George Bourillon of Philadelphia.

Walter G. Gest, a friend of Vaniman's financial backer.

Up to sundown two bodies, those of Calvin Vaniman and Bourillon, had been recovered from the wreckage, which lies submerged in about eighteen feet of water off Brigantine Beach.

The Akron, which had been inflated last February with gas manufactured by Vaniman in the big hangar, was taken out shortly after 6 a. m. for a test flight. One flight already had been made about a month ago and defects discovered at that time were remedied. Today's trial was to have been among the last prior to the attempt to cross the Atlantic. Mrs. Vaniman bid her husband good-by at their little cottage near the hangar at 2 a. m. and waited for daybreak to see her husband sail away.

The city authorities had been notified of the intended flight and a hundred policemen, firemen and other willing helpers assisted in loading the great gas bag out of the hangar. A large crowd had gathered. The launching of the air craft was accomplished without difficulty, and she sailed gracefully away. Over the waters of Absecon inlet Vaniman maneuvered and then after a few other movements she shaped the ship's course out to sea.

When a half mile off Brigantine beach the thousands of spectators who had been watching the ship saw a burst of flame. For perhaps ten seconds the half million dollar dirigible was invisible, while the air about the spot where she had been hovering seemed to be all fire. Then the ship outlined sharply against the sun, was seen to fall like a plummet. First the car in which were penned the unfortunate men broke away from the envelope and up-ended, the bow turning first in a slow arc. Then it reversed suddenly and plunged downward. Directly above, twisting in a long spiral, was the bag, a smoking mass of rubber and silk with flames shooting out from a dozen sections as it collapsed. It fluttered a moment and then dropped after the car.

Body Seen Plunging Down.

In the descent something which appeared to be the body of a man shot out to the left of the wreckage and hit the water before the rest of the descending mass. It was reported that this was the body of Calvin Vaniman.

Fishermen and yachtsmen who were out in the little boats watching the ship immediately started to the rescue. Powerboats and every other kind of craft in the resort were brought into use, and soon a hundred boats were beating their way out over the rough waters of the inlet bay.

When the first boats reached the wreck the rescuers found only the collapsed gas bag. After a search a submerged body was recovered. It proved to be that of the younger Vaniman. Among the first on the scene were the Federal life-savers stationed in Atlantic City. Divers went down to the wreck, but there was little that could be done until low tide, when Gek's body was disentangled from the wreckage and brought ashore.

Four Wires See Disaster.

Mrs. Vaniman saw the collapse of the balloon, and its drop into the ocean, carrying with it her husband and brother-in-law. She fell in a faint, and was unconscious for some time. Friends who were with her sent for physicians, and when she recovered consciousness she talked of her husband's bravery. The wives of Bourillon, Gest and Elmer, who lived near by, also saw the disaster from their homes. Neighbors tenderly cared for them, and later they went over to the Vaniman cottage, where a most distressing scene followed. Men turned away as the four widows wept in each other's arms.

Mrs. Vaniman, although she fainted on the porch of her little dwelling when she saw her husband dropping to his death, stood the strain better than the others after she finally became conscious and was upon her feet. Mrs. Bourillon and Mrs. Elmer cried on Mrs. Vaniman's shoulder. Despite the intensity of the moment Mrs. Vaniman talked of her husband.

"He was so very brave," she said, "that I believe he never knew what fear was. I never presumed to urge him not to go up, for I knew it would not influence him. It would be more exact to say that he would not even hear what I said. He was devoted to his work, and flight in the air, however dangerous, was to him merely an incident. It was a step in his pleasurable science of air navigation, which he studied when he was awake and dreamed of when he slept.

"I shall never forget the feeling in my heart when he left me at 2 o'clock this morning. I had a foreboding of trouble. I believe it now as truly as I can believe anything and I am not a superstitious woman, either.

Witnessed Fatal Plunge.

"Yes, I saw them fall. I saw one man jump. Something tells me that it was my husband. I saw him spread out in the air flat, as he fell, and then—oh! I can scarcely speak of it—all grew dark before me. They were so high in the air—it must have been a thousand feet.

"Before I fainted, I now remember that the car turned with one end downward and it fell towards the sea like a cloth, all in a string. I can recall that picture all the rest of my days; it is photographed on my mind.

"All these years of my husband's struggle, he and I have been as one. I planned with him, shared his troubles and did what I could to encourage him.

Praises Financial Backer.

"At times, in Europe, things were very depressing. But Mr. Ziberling of Akron, his financial backer, has been a splendid friend. We have never heard from him one word except in praise.

"This Akron he was using for experiment only in a field that he believed already past in the science of aeronautics. His particular reason for going up today was to try out a contrivance he had for estimating the speed an aeroplane travels, an invention of his own, based upon measurements on ground glass of an inverted camera showing the earth or sea moving down below."

After the first excitement and shock had passed, Mrs. Vaniman again collapsed and later in the day was under the care of a physician. She is suffering frequent fainting spells and her condition is serious.

Speculation on Cause.

There are many theories as to the cause of the disaster. One is that air got into the gas bag. Another that the rays of the morning sun expanded the gas and caused the great envelope to burst. A third was that flames reached the gasoline and a fourth theory advanced was that a stray rope caught in one of the pulleys, that it was whipped around and striking the gas bag tore a hole in it, letting out the gas.

The flight was the second that the airship had taken this year. After tinkering all winter on the ship Vaniman took the Akron out for a short flight Saturday morning, June 1. At that time the balloon was nearly wrecked by some of the mechanism going wrong, but it was landed without serious mishap.

The longest flight the balloon made was last fall, when it spent the greater part of the day in the air in the vicinity of this city. At that time the gas in the bag was not sufficient to keep the big ship constantly in the air and it had to make several landings. During the winter Vaniman improved the ship through lessons learned in that flight.

Looked Like the "America".

In general appearance the Akron was not unlike the America, in which Walter Wellman and Vaniman attempted to cross the Atlantic ocean in October, 1910, but there were many differences in the construction. The gas bag was thirty feet longer than that of the America, but was smaller in diameter. The dimensions were: Length of bag, 258 feet; diameter, 47 feet. The bag was made of a composition of rubber and was constructed in Ohio.

Beneath was the car, similar in shape to the America's, but longer—perhaps 150 feet long. The bottom of the car was composed of a round steel tank two feet in diameter and about 100 feet long. In this tank was stored the gasoline. The car was connected to the gas bag by steel tubing of light construction. On top of the tank was a platform of two-inch boards and on this rested one 100-horsepower motor, two of 80-horsepower, one 17-horsepower motor and a small dynamo.

To a reporter recently Vaniman expressed the fullest confidence in the Akron to "make good." He was constantly aware of the dangerous nature of the gas used for inflating the bag, but he felt that it was safe from explosion, as no flame could reach it.

Gov. Wilson Wires Sympathy.

SEAGIRT, N. J., July 2.—Governor Woodrow Wilson expressed his sympathy to Mrs. Melvin Vaniman over the death of her husband in a telegram addressed to her at Atlantic City tonight. The message read as follows:

"May I not extend to you my heartfelt sympathy for your tragic loss?" (Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

NO HATS IN CHINA TO TOSS INTO RING

The demand for straw hats in China is immense at present; for the people can find no head-coverings for summer for their former costumes, after cutting off their queues. Factories now existing in the interior of China, and several more which might possibly be established there in the near future, will hardly be competent to affect materially the shipment of foreign makes. The future market of this item is made particularly promising by the fact that straw hats are used in the Chinese army during summer time.

The Asiatic Jih Pao states that it fears was, I never presumed to urge him not to go up, for I knew it would not influence him. It would be more exact to say that he would not even hear what I said. He was devoted to his work, and flight in the air, however dangerous, was to him merely an incident. It was a step in his pleasurable science of air navigation,

MAY

By GEORGE FITCH

The month of May is a long stretch of joy enclosed between two of our saddest holidays. On the first of May millions of sorrowful Americans bid good-bye to the old homesteads which have sheltered them for the past twelve months, and move into other flats with warmer hot water. On the thirty-first of May we mourn the noble dead who fought for their country and left widows to fight for a pension against the stern and unyielding descendants of the men who stayed at home.

Otherwise, however, May is our happiest month. It arrives with the last coal bill, and departs before the first fly. In May, Spring becomes entirely convalescent, and for the first time man can shed his coat and go forth to view the budding world with-
